

Dr Eugeniu BANU, MD.

Medical Director, Head of Medical Oncology Department, Saint Constantin Private Hospital, Brasov, Romania

Letter in support of my “Open Seats” candidature for consideration by the EACR Council
Nominating Committee

I am board-certified medical oncologist (in France and Romania) and senior clinical research scientist, involved in clinical research activity, working in a private structure, Saint Constantin Hospital, City of Brasov, Romania. As mentioned in my CV, I am full member in multiple professional societies in oncology including EACR, medical reviewer for ten medical journals, with consulting activities for specific structures.

I am interested to apply for an “Open Seat” position in order to provide some input and promote durable development in oncology. The main field of interest is to create a link between those researchers involved in translational activities and clinicians. This kind of interrelation is essential in order to make some progress. East-European countries are less represented in the EACR Council. Those Romanian medical structures interested to be part of the EACR professional networking are extremely motivated. All are interested to have a “National Network Seat” in the next future. For the moment, an “Open Seat” occupied by a medical doctor involved in clinical research from a country as Romania, member of European Union, will be a good reason to motivate those researchers from the East of Europe.

With my academic profile and experience, I consider that I will be able to help the committee in the next future.
